(54) Information processor

(57) A temporary user is permitted a right to use an information processor only temporarily. A directory registers user name, user password and right to use attribute. If a user logging on is permitted to use, the directory is updated to cancel the right, to prevent later use. Alternatively, the directory may specify number of permissions, or a time interval. The initial use may depend on current time or number of failures. Non-temporary users may be distinguished.
